Condition and maintenance history

142 West 88th Street, Triplex. Compiled by Eleanor Whitcomb, September 25, 2026.

Before the tenancy: the apartment was painted and the floors redone in late 2022. Karen Liu's 2022 listing photographs show intact fireplace tiles and window woodwork, and good floors with a few dark spots and one diagonal scratch in the living room. A family stayed briefly over the 2022 holidays before the Brenners moved in on January 9, 2023.

June 11, 2024: Laura Brenner emailed 22 photographs of screens, a loose dining-room hearth, loose or broken tiles, missing molding and a small missing parquet piece, describing them as existing on arrival. None of this was reported within the two days required by rider ¶14.

Complaints during the tenancy: uneven room temperatures, a clogged toilet, a roof leak, weak dryer performance, bin lids and the intercom. Work done: screens repaired, window weather stripping and five temperature sensors added, a new intercom installed and the leaks repaired.

June 2024: during a screen inspection Eleanor found a dog accident on the floor; Laura apologized and cleaned it up.

Repeated indoor grilling caused grease odors and set off smoke alarms. Eleanor asked the Brenners to stop.

August 2026: a slow leak under the kitchen sink damaged the cabinet base and subfloor. Feld Architecture managed the repair: new supply lines and shutoff valves, a replaced sink base and a patched subfloor. Work finished August 21; Feld signed it off on August 24 after a moisture check. No further work is needed.
